[FROM THE NEW YORK SPIRIT OF THE TIMES.] THE MAJOR'S FIRST DECLARATION.

"I always was," said the Major, slowly filling his glass, "what you might call 'a bashful man, among the women.' I am as bold as a lion with the men, but some how, when I find myself in the company of ladies, I feel my valor 'oozing out at my finger's ends,' It's a kind of constitutional weakness of mine, decidedly provoking to myself, and troublesome to my friends, and what's worse, I don't get rid of it, and on this account it was most likely that I lived to be twenty-eight, and had never made love to mortal woman.

"Well, about that time, (when I had celebrated my twenty-eighth birth-day,) the old gentleman (that is the Major, senior,) had a claim against the government that needed 'nursing,' and so he sent me on to Washington to attend to it. He gave me letters to several Hon. M. C.'s, with instructions never to stop worrying 'em until I got the 'bill passed, as this would probably take some time, he recommended me to a 'quiet boarding house,' where I would find 'all the comforts of home,' cheerfully farmis ied at the rate of five dollars a week. The boarders were numerous but select, comprising I was su prised to find quite a number of claimants besides myself, and all equally sure of success. But a most lovely vision the very first day atdinner, not all claims and claimants out of my head. Oh, what radiant, breathing beauty! "The rose," said the Major, falling into a poetical vein, "the rose blended with the hig in her complexion, and her eyes-Oh, heavens! I can't describe her eyes! But there she sat right before me, and I had to stare at her, do what I ject : would. By Jove, my boys, just you fall in love eat much, I'll warrant; and how I didn't that day. I had noticed at dinner, that a pale, meek appearing little gentleman, who sat beside her, seemed by his attention likely to prove a rival, but I felt that if I could only conquer my foolish timidity, my personal attractions, (there the Major gave an approving glance at the opposite mirror,) would car- bility be removed, or a President elected." ry the day. The Memphis Eugle and Enquirer, says the cars, on the thirty miles now being used on this end of the Memphis and Charleston Railroad, are doing a fine business. The receipts last month were about $7,000, or at the rate of $84,000 a year. The passenger train yesterday took up 40 and brought down 80 passengers. These figures show remarkably well, when we consider the shortness of the road and the continued inclemency of the weather .-When the road is completed to LaGrange, a distance of 50 miles, which it is believed will be the case by the middle or last of April, business and travel will at once be immensely increased. The cars, then, will in all probability bring down from President, if such number be a majority of the

NASHVILLE, TENN.

WEDNESDAY MORNING, MARCH 2, 1853.

A FEW PLAIN FACTS.

The Bonner of yesterday, under the head of New York Politics, charges that Mancy, Flagg and Dix spoken of for the cabinet, are all supported by Freesoilers, and very significantly asks the question "what does this indicate?"

Plain people in the country, not in the mysteries of political warfare, will doubtless think this "an ominous sign," a "fearful portent," and Heaven knows what else, while in fact, in the eyes of sensible people, it is significant of nothing. To show that the editor of the Banner himself attaches no significance to it, we have only to state a few facts which our neighbor knows to be true with regard to Mr. FILLMORE, and will not contradict.

1st. That DANIEL WEBSTER, Mr. FILLMORE'S Secretary of State, voted for the Wilmot Proviso in the United States Senate; spoke for it, and declared it. to be a schig principle, and charged VAN BUREN with stealing it from the whigs.

2d. That even after the passage of the Compromise. Mr. WEBSTER declared that he would never consent to see slavery extended to the territories where it did not exist; and that the men who asserted otherwise, were "Mercenary Heeps."

3d. That Thomas Corwin, Mr. Fillmore's Secretary of the Treasury, voted for the Wilmot Proviso and spoke for it in the United States Senate. If it is alleged that WEBSTER and Conwin afterwards placed themselves upon the Compromise we reply, that so far as Mr. Corwin is concerned, we have seen no satisfactory evidence of the fact and do not believe it. We also reply that the democratic Freesoilers in the last canvass placed themselves upon the Compromise by their support of Pierce and King, and that the same argument which excuses Fillmore would also justify General Pierce, should he act in the same way.

AN OMITTED CASE IN THE CONSTITUTION.

The accident of the cars, which deprived General PIERCE of his son, and so endangered his own existence, and the illness of Mr. King threatening at one time to end fatally before the counting of the votes for President and Vice President, has attracted attention to the want of legislation to meet the contingency of the death of the President or Vice President after election, but before inauguration or counting of the votes. The necessity of some rule established either by law, or amendment of the constitution to meet this contingency is self-evident .-Party feeling amounts to a passion with the American people, and the occurrence of the contingency stated, might seriously jeopardise the peace of our country. The constitution and laws made in pursuance thereof, have settled the rule in case of the death of President and Vice President after inauguration, but it has not settled it, if either or both of them should occur after election, but before inauguration. We find in the Louisville Journal the following analysis of the laws of Congress on this sub-

By authority of the 6th section of the 2d article right off, at first sight, as I did, and sit opposite of the constitution, which declares that "Congress your inamorata at dinner, and-well, you won't may by law provide for the case of removal, death, &c., of both the President and Vice President, declaring what officer shall then act as President, and such officer shall act accordingly until the disability covering my feelings to ask any one, but I resolved | be removed or a President shall be elected," an act of Congress was passed, which is now in full force, which enacts: "That, in case of a removal, death, resignation, or inability both of the President and Vice President of the United States, the President of the Senate pro tempore, and, in case there be no President of the Senate, then the Speaker of the House of Representatives for the time being, shall act as President of the United States until the disa-

The same act of Congress provides, that, when such deaths happen, the Secretary of State shall "Captain Brown," (I was only Captain then,) said | forthwith notify the Executives of all the States, the landlady, 'allow me to introduce you to Mrs. | and shall also cause it to be published in one paper in each State specifying that electors shall be chosen within thirty-four days preceding the first Wednesday in December then next ensuing, provided there be the space of two months between such notification and the first Wednesday in December; and if the term for which the President and Vice President last in office were elected shall not expire on the third day of March next ensuing, then the Secretary of State shall notify that the electors shall be chosen thirty-four days before the first Wednesday in December next ensuing, and shall on that day meet and cast their votes. In the event of the death of the President, the body, so fearful was I of being suspected, and I | Vice President performs his functions, and, if both even carried my caution so far as at all times to die, then the President of the Senate, pro tempore, avoid the presence of the meek gentleman, whose | and if there be none, then the Speaker of the House name even I did not inquire after, and as we never | of Representatives, until another is elected. These provisions of the constitution, and the law made under it, would keep the executive machinery of government in motion, in the event of the death of one or both of those officers, duly elected and qualified; but the difficulty arises, when one or both of those officers may die or refuse to qualify, between the periods of the election of the electoral colleges and the counting the votes by Congress, or the qualifieation by oath as directed by the constitution, or in other words, when the electors shall have met and chosen a President and Vice President by casting a majority of votes for those officers, and shall have Like a swimmer who plunges at once into the transmitted to Washington their votes, and the persons chosen shall die before Congress shall count the votes, or if counted and the result declared, shall 'Madam,' said I, 'I hardly know in what terms | die before they are qualified, are such persons President and Vice President in the eye of the constitu-

It is certainly not probable that such a contingency would occur; but the possibility of it is sufficient reason for meeting the case, either by legislative enactment or amendment of the constitution, as is

Having given the law upon this subject, a publi cation of the provisions of the constitution bearing upon it may not be uninteresting to our readers: The Executive power shall be vested in a President of the United States of America. He shall hold his office during the term of four years, and, together with the Vice President, chosen for the same term, be elected, as follows: Each State shall appoint, in such manner as the Legislature thereof may direct, a number of electors, equal to the whole number of Senators and Representatives to which the State may be entitled in the Congress; but no Senator or Representative, or person holding an office of trust or profit under the United States, shall be appointed an elector .-

Art. 2, sees. 1, 2. The electors shall meet in their respective States, and vote by ballot for President and Vice President, one of whom, at least, shall not be an inhabitant of the same State with themselves; they shall name in their ballots the person voted for as President, and in distinct ballots the person voted for as Vice President, and they shall make distinct lists of all persons voted for as President, and of all persons voted for as Vice President, and of the number of votes for each, which lists they shall sign and certify, and transmit sealed to the seat of government of the United States, directed to the President of the Senate; the President of the Senate shall, in the presence of the Senate and House of Representatives, open all the certificates, and the vote shall then be counted; the person having the greatest number of votes for President, shall be the whole number of electors appointed; and if no person have such majority, then from the persons hav-Ex-President Van Buren, we learn, will start for | ing the highest numbers not exceeding three on the list of those voted for as President, the House of Martin Van Buren, jr., whose impaired health, it is Representatives shall choose immediately, by ballot, the President. And if the House of Representatives shall not choose a

President whenever the choice shall devolve upon them, before the fourth day of March next following, then the Vice President shall act as President, as in the case of the death or other constitutional disability of the President. The person having the greatest number of votes as Vice President, if such number be a majority of the whole number of electors appointed, and if no person have a majority, then from the two highest numbers on the list, the Senate shall choose the Vice President; a quorum for the purpose shall consist of two-thirds of the whole number of Senators, and a majority of the whole number shall be necessary to a choice. But no person constitutionally ineligible to the office of President shall be eligible to that of Vice President of the United States.-Art. 12. In case of the removal of the President from office, or his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the Vice President, and the Congress may, by law, provide for the case of removal, death, resignation, or inability both of the President and Vice President, declaring what officer shall then act as President, and such officer shall act accordingly, until the disability be removed, or a President shall be elected.—Art. 2, sec. 6.

The Vice President of the United States shall be President of the Senate, but shall have no vote unless they be equally divided. The Senate shall choose their other officers, and also a president protempore, in the absence of the Vice Fresident, or when he shall exercise the office of the President of the United States .- Art. 1, 4, and 5. Sec. 3. Before he enters on the execution of his office he

[the President] shall take the following oath or affirmation : I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will faithfully execute the office of President of the United States, and will, to the best of my ability, preserve, protect, and defend the Constitution of the United States.'-Secs. 8 and 9. Article 2.

The Senators, &c., and all executive and judicial officers shall be bound to support this constitution, &c.-Art. 6. 2d Section.

For sometime the world has heard but little of MARTIN VAN BUREN. It is true that every now and then the readers of the Northern papers see a letter from him upon either agriculture or politics. But farmers are careless of his advice upon agriculture, and parties most supremely indifferent to his political speculations. He maimed himself in 1844, and became a felo de se in 1848, by running against Cass. He is now, we see, about to make a tour in Europe. He is the first Ex-President who ever visited Europe after occupying the "White House," and some interest is felt by the curious, as to the reception he will meet. We shall see in due time.

MONUMENT TO WASHINGTON .- A circular and address of a committee of the citizens of Massachusetts to the people of the Commonwealth is published, inviting their aid for the completion of the noble monument at the Capital of the United States, in honor of the Father of his Country. This enterprise, which has, since its commencement, advanced with a steady step, until it has reached an elevation of one hundred and twenty feet, and has come within view of it, needs for its completion the united co-operation of every part of the country. We hope the other States will follow the example set by Massachusetts.

The papers publish later news from Texas, The only item worthy of notice we have found, is that the first locomotive has been introduced into the State on the Harrisburg railroad.

We learn from the Vicksburg Whig that Gov. Foote, of Mississippi, had appointed B. M. KINYON, of Tishimingo county, to the U. S. Senate, to succeed the Hon. WALTER BROOKE, and that Mr. K. has declined. Gov. Foote says that he shall not make another appointment put will refer the subject to the people.

ATMOSPHEEIC LEVER CHURN.-J. H. CURRY, on College Street, has the patent-right for this county of this rather unique and useful invention. We were present a few evenings since to witness a trial of this churn, and must say that we were both surprised and gratified to see the result. Near three gallons of cream were placed in the churn and in five minutes the butter was separated from the milk. The construction of this churn is plain and simple, and may be worked by a child ten years old. Of the utility of this machine over others we need not speak; an examination of it will convince the most incredulous. We advise housekeepers to call at Mr. Curry's and see this truly valuable addition to an important department of housekeeping. We feel certain that those who give it an examination will be sure to purchase one-the expense is trifling. In addition to this labor-saving machine Mr. C. has every thing in the way of furniture-both useful and ornamental, -and cheap at that. Give him a

SUGGESTED IMPROVEMENT IN EDUCATION.—The Committee of Overseers of Harvard College, consisting of Cales Cushing and other gentlemen, suggest, in a recent report, the propriety of endeavoring to induce the State of Massachusetts to appropriate a portion of the school fund to provide scholarships in the different colleges of the State for meritorious youths from the common schools. The reason they assign for this suggestion is that at present there is a strong tendency in the higher common schools to do too much, and to attempt to give the kind of instruction appropriate to a college, to the neglect of elementary knowledge. They also urge it as uniting the entire educational system of the State in one coherent whole, beginning at the primary school, and terminating, for the more deserving, in a collegiate education at Harvard, Williams, or Amherst college. Such a scheme would be a noble project for the adoption of other States, and, fittingly, has its origin in Massachusetts-the State which has done more to give an advanced education to all its youth than any other State of the Union.

The House of Representatives received a message from the President, enclosing the outlines of some very important communications recently made to the State department by the British minister, concerning Central American affairs. In these documents it is positively denied that the English goverument has any intention of violating the Claytor -Bulwer treaty, by exercising, either directly or in directly, any sovereignty in Central America. It is also plainly intimated that Great Britain is very desirous of backing out of the Mosquito protectorate, and, in order that she may have a plausible excuse for so doing, she proposes that this government shall assist her in negotiating with his copper colored Majesty, the King of the Mosquitos, for all his right, title and interest, in the city of San Juan del Norte, in order that it may be constituted a free city in' name as well as in reality, which it now is. It is also designed that this free city shall continue, as at present, to be governed by rulers elected by the people. All this, and more, too, is proposed by England, with the view, if possible, of settling the disputes among the different States of Central America, and thus allowing the great inter-oceanic canal to be completed. This canal is the all-important object on which England now has her eye; she feels that it will be of more commercial value to her than all the Indian kings and their tribes put together. Under these circumstances, Secretary Everett recommends the strengthening of our diplomatic relations with the Central American States, in order that the interests of this country may be properly represented therein .- New York Herall.

This ship arrived at Alexandria on Monday afternoon from the mouth of the Potomac, where she had lain at anchor for twenty-seven hours during the late snow storm and thick weather. Captain Lowser weighed anchor at half past nine o'clock last Wednesday morning at Sandy Hook, and, in pursuance of instructions, stood to the east in the face of a strong gale and heavy sea. He kept his course for eighty miles, when the wind shifted to the northwest. He then stood in shore again in the face of the gale. During these two gales the ship stood the test nobly, and though she pitched her bowsprit under water, with her lee-guard immersed, her engines performed with the utmost regularity, the wheels making six turns and a half a minute, with entire uniformity. Not the slightest motion was perceptible in the frame work and bracing of the engines. After the ship and engines were thus fully tested, Captain Lowber shaped his course for the Chesapeake, and in going up the bay encountered a heavy snow storm.

On approaching the mouth of the Potomac the weather became so thick that the pilot declined to go further, and the ship came to anchor at ten o'clock Saturday morning. The engines had then been in operation for seventy-three hours without being stopped for a moment or requiring the slightest adjustment, only one fireman having been on duty at a time during the whole trip. The consumption of fuel was under five tons in the twentyfour hours. Captain Sanns, of the navy, who was on board to witness the performance, is delighted with the result, and says that he would willingly go to Australia in her. Thus the great principle of the new motor is now a demonstrated reality.-Washington Repullic.

RAMSEY'S HISTORY OF TENNESSEE. - The friends o southern and indigenous literature, and those who appreciate and regret the vacum that exists in our torical literature especially, will receive with a much pleasure as we feel in making it, the announcement that a "History of Tenuessee" is now going through the press of Messrs. By extensive and continued correspondence, and by laborious research among the archives of North Carolina, Georgia, Virginia, and the records of the first settled counties of his own state, Dr. Ramsey has accordingly accumulated a mass of new and valuable materials, which, when reduced and arranged under his able hand, must result in a most valuable already become an object of interest to those who and interesting work. She wears the original thirteen stars upon her forehead. Her attitude is as of one addressing the people, and the motto is, "Trust in God, maintain the Union, and crush Despotism." Her expression is earnest and confident, and she is draped from the waist down, but in such

It is probable that Congress will order this great work of our great native artist. One of our representatives, the Hon. R. H. Stanton, proposed in the House an appropriation of $20,000 some two years ago for the purpose, and we observe that a similar proposition has been made in the Senate lately by Senator Chase.
